The illimitable gall of some men makes our legs ache. A candidate for congress over in the north tier writes to the effect that he wants "marked copies" sent him whenever this paper says anything com-plimentary of him. Now, candidates all, listen to years of experience: First, when you resolve to enter the lists, sit down and write the editor a nice, adoring letter. Tell him you have long been yearning for his valuable publication and inclose $1.50. If you are pushed for time, you may trim off some of the yearn and some of the adore, but in no case should you moderate the $1.50. Don't say anything about being a candidate. Editors are gifted with remarkable powers of analogy, and you will be charmed and surprised beyond expression at the skill with which they fathom your secret. By and by some venal Populist will assail your noble character. And then, ah then, a champion will spring to your support. In the meantime, we will remark, the dodo over in the north tier may re main in his sepulcher until doomsday, and we will never roll away the stone with "marked copies."—Hays City Sen-

PEFFER ON TARIFF.

The Senator Says the Wilson Tariff Bill

Is No Whit Better Than the McKinley Bill.

ONLY MOVES THE TAX

From Raw Materials to Manufactured Articles.

Favors a Very Limited System of Protection.

WASHINGTON, April 6 .- Senator Peffer addressed the senate today on the tariff

Mr. Peffer introduced his speech by discussing the subject of taxation and the amounts paid by the people of the United States to support the government. All taxes, he said, paid by the people of the United States amount to nearly onehalf of the government debt at the close of the war. He also declared the large payments of interests by the people of the United States had not been accurately ascertained, but were enormous. He also mentioned the large amount of money spent on sports, for spirits, to-bacco, on boards of trade and in other ways.

"In every way," said Mr. Peffer, "the people are taxed, and it ought to be the aim of statesman to make these burdens

Mr. Peffer entered into a discussion of revenue and protective tariffs and said: "The difference in practice in the two theories is seen chiefly not in an aggre-gate reduction of duties, as the amount of revenue must be raised, but in the manner of adjusting rates.

"The most consistent and practicable system of tariff taxation for revenue only is that adopted by Great Britain—taxing only such articles as are not produced in the country levying the tax, and in addition upon such articles as are more or less harmful in character-as liquors and

"But while this method is simple, it is unjust in its operation. Sugar, coffee, tea and spices would supply all the rev-enue we now derive from customs. But a system which operates so unjustly upon poor people could not be enforced in this Best Tariff was in 1846. "The best representative revenue tar-iff we ever had was that of 1846. There is not enough difference between the two schools of tariff statesmen worth quarreling about. They are both protection as may be seen by comparing the Mills bill with the tariff of 1893 and the Wilson bill, with the tariff of 1890. The first tariff was for two purposes—raising tevenue and to establish domestic manufacturing industries and the effect has been what was desired and expected. "In 1890 the McKinley bill increased ctice in Federal and State Courts. duties 100 per cent on many articles, in- 17,000 head. cluding wool, cutlery and porcelain. The McKinley bill was in some respects a legislative monetrosity. The Mills bill was a protection measure drawn on a platform which adopted the president's message as one of its planks. That platform states the doctrine of protection closely. The Mills bill was framed to cover the difference between wages in this country and others whose production competes with ours.

"The Wilson bill is a protective measure. It surrenders revenue on the lux-uries. It discriminates against farms. "The duties on many of the farm products are of no benefit to the farmer, but when they are of any use, let them re-main, if the protection policy is to be maintained. "The Wilson bill allows a loss of reve nue that might as well be retained. It is no better on the whole than the present law. It has free wool, but taxes clothes; free hides, but taxes shoes. It protects manufacturers and gives free raw ma-

"The chairman of the finance committee denounced protection as robbery. How can he support this bill? His speech was an arraignment of his col-leagues and an apology for himself. When the tariff reformers bring us free wool and leave such burdens on the clothing of men and women, who perform the manual labor of the country, may not we inquire where the line is to be drawn between a tariff for revenue only and the culminating atrocity of class legisla-

Populists Have No Tariff Plank. "The Populists have no tariff plank in their platform. We view the subject from the standpoint of taxation. understand that the levying of tariff duties is a tax upon the people, and we would make the burden as light as possible. We look upon this subject through the eyes of the working men. We study it from the standpoint of the poor and lowly. The wealthy take care of them-

"The Populists believe in a graduated income tax and regard it as the most equitable system of taxation. While politicians juggle with the tariff, statesmen ought to make it a matter of business.

"The Populists do not believe in pulling down the rich but in raising up the poor. We do not believe in abandoning wholly the present system. It take it that professed tariff reformers do not see how greatly their practice contrasts with their theory-they mean well, but lack courage only.

"Protection, as taught by our fathers, is the proper doctrine. Protection to domestic industries. Only such industries as can be made national, employing large numbers of people, shall be protected, and that only long enough to establish them; after that save the market for them and no more. Bountles in many cases are better than cheaper du-

Mr. Peffer then explained that the bill was objectionable in some features to his constituents, and explained at some length the conditions of Kansas.
